

The Heifetz Recital

National Theater, March 8, '18

This Young Russian violinist has astounded the musical world with his mastery of his instrument.

Everywhere audiences accustomed to really "dissect" every tone and effect have given way to outbursts of enthusiasm that are simply the expression of their "welled up" emotions.

His Victrola Records Are Superb Renditions

So true are they to the actual performance that a violinist really sees the very bowing and fingering of the artist.

Camoufleurs Score Brilliant Success in Realm of Society With Last Night's Ball.

Galá Day at Quantic With Smart Matrons and Pretty Girls Participating.

Precedent and prejudice against the chief executive leaving the country during his term of office notwithstanding, the President, with Mrs. Wilson and a party of guests, spent part of last evening at a village in Alsace, watching for an hour or more from an ancient arcade a gay revelry of merriment. Prosperity in the familiar uniform of the United States Army, with here and there a flash of color denoting the uniform of an ally; troubadours in the picturesque garb of the middle ages; princes and peasants; students and maids trim and smart enough to hail from Paris; camoufleurs in gaudy smocks, with palettes and brushes as headpieces—all were in the colorful throng which snuggled little tables in the quaint street, danced and coquetted. Rows of quaint, medieval houses with overhanging stories, windows set with blooming plants and balconies from which many men and women prominent in the world of Washington society participated in the passing pageant, formed their background.

The distance from the White House was no greater than to the Willard Hotel, and the presidential party accomplished the journey by automobile in a few moments, but once within the hotel the transformation was as complete as though they had crossed the seas and entered a village in the province so hotly contested by opposing armies for more than three years. The Camouflage Corps, Company B of the Engineers, had wrought the transformation, and patrons long familiar with the ballroom of the Willard, debutantes who have many times read palms and predicted futures, lined its walls. There were parties at the little tables on the terrace, and the whole picture was a successful reproduction of a Neapolitan street scene.

The President and Mrs. Wilson, before turning their backs on the gay revel shortly before midnight, made a tour of both rooms. The dancing kept up until 4 o'clock this morning, with a supper served at midnight in the dining rooms on the first floor.

Mrs. Wilson Wears Orchids.

As the President and Mrs. Wilson, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Julian Bell, Miss Bones, Miss Benham, Commander Fisher and Lieut. Battles, passed under the bridge which spanned the entrance to the ballroom, about 10:30 o'clock, all the vast assemblage lined up, the camoufleurs forming a special guard and a special escort of men in khaki, with bayonets, leading the way. This escort stood at attention as the presidential party took its places in the box over which hung the Stars and Stripes, and the orchestra, in its balcony opposite the President's box, played "The Star Spangled Banner."

Mrs. Wilson was very handsome in pale gray taffeta with orchids in her corsage and carrying a large fan of orchid ostrich plumes. She wore in her dark hair a tiara of diamonds.

Miss Bones wore a lovely gown of gold-colored tulle over satin of the same shade. Mrs. Benham wore a pink satin and tulle, and Miss Benham wore cream-colored satin and lace.

The guests were received by the officers of Neighborhood House, for whose benefit the ball was given.

In the line were Miss Sophy Siebert, president of the board of managers of Neighborhood House; Mrs. Charles J.

Bell, Mrs. F. J. Kernan, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Huber, Mrs. von Starckenborgh, Stachowicz, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Mrs. Paul Bartlett, Mrs. Richard T. Crane and Mrs. Frederic Altherton.

A committee of costume camoufleurs conducted a very busy booth and supplied many disguises. Mrs. Foulke Smith and Mrs. Sewall were in charge, and assisting them were Mrs. Harold Walker, Miss Gladys Hinkley, Mrs. Frederic Altherton and Mrs. C. Russell Peabody.

Miss Adelaide Heath, chairman of the lemonade committee, had assisting her the Misses Tuttle, Miss Minna Hair, the Misses Cummin, Miss Bessie Edwards, Miss Cecilia McCallum, Miss Margaret McChord, Miss Herbert, Miss Henry, Miss

Their guests included Mrs. Poe White, Miss Gladys Hinkley, Miss Rebecca Collier, Baron Gunzberg of the Russian embassy, Mr. Shepherd, Mr. Janney, Capt. Pitt Scott, Maj. Brighton and Mr. Archibald Wells of Philadelphia. Costumes Gay and Confusing.

While many adhered to the dignity of conventional dress, the majority of the guests entered entirely into the carnival spirit of the occasion, emphasizing its picturesque aspects with costumes gay and confusing.

Miss Siebert, president of Neighborhood House, who stood at the head of the receiving line, was camouflaged as a lily pond. Purple tulle painted in pond lilies and fringed with green, representing grass veiled her blue evening dress of satin.

Mrs. Charles J. Bell, a lovely costume of pink velvet and a white wig.

Mr. Robert Bell, a Spanish costume. Mrs. Gardner Bell, a stunning costume of cerise velvet over white brocade and a white wig.

Miss Cannon wore a handsome gown of silver cloth and black velvet. Mrs. Francis J. Kernan, a handsome costume of black satin and jet with touches of gold lace on the bodice.

Mrs. John Jacob Rogers wore a camouflage costume representing morning mist, painted with frosted trees on a pale gray background. The headpiece was a frosted branch. This was worn over a pale pink satin gown.

Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, as a Rumanian fortune teller, wore a most effective costume of red satin, veiled in chiffon of various shades, held with a scarf of silk. She wore a head-dress of red silk and chiffon and many
